Mission Accomplished

Business Analysis Ltd, Romsey, Hants, UK

A big software order from a client with a small budget. That's the dilemma that faced Business Analysis Ltd, a small British software firm specializing in platform-independent repair center management applications. The client needed to supply a hundred users -- but had to keep the product affordable. Because a system based on SCO's OpenServer pushed the project over budget, the idea of recommending a system built around Red Hat Linux quickly surfaced. "How well does Red Hat perform in place of SCO?" asks Business Analysis' Jeremy Rogers. "In regards to our applications you can't tell the difference." Installation on the client's Xeon 800-processed system took just ten minutes -- and the total cost savings on the project amounted to £5000.
